"If I don't sleep 11 to 12 hours per day, it's not right. If I don't have that amount of sleep, I hurt myself." - Roger Federer

"Sleep is extremely important to me. I need to rest and recover in order for the training I do to be absorbed by my body. I normally sleep 8–10 hours per night, and take naps during the day when I'm training hard." - Usain Bolt

"I can't stress that enough. Sleep is everything. Sleep, exercise, health, keep the body functioning correctly. All those things, they're not just a vanity thing and it's not a laziness thing. It literally improves the quality of the way the mind functions." - Matthew McConaughey

"Recovery and sleep are really, really important. Finding the right mixture between what you eat, the sleep and the actual activities you do is one of the hardest things to get right. That's something I'm searching for all the time." - Lewis Hamilton
